Halocha from the Daf

What should one do if he discovers that he is carrying a tissue, etc., or an item of little value in his pocket while walking in an area which is not enclosed by an eiruv?

As soon as he discovers his mistake he may not stop walking for even a moment, and while continuing to walk he should:

Option 1: Turn his pocket inside out until the tissue drops out and falls to the ground.

Option 2: Quickly walk back to his point of departure without stopping along the way at all. If his point of departure is too far or otherwise not accessible, he should quickly walk to the closest possible enclosed area (Private Domain) that he can find, without stopping along the way at all. But for this option to work, two conditions must be met: He must be sure that he never stopped and he will be able to enter his point of departure without interrupting his walking.

Option 3: Locate an area classified as a makom p'tur, an Exempt (neutral) Area, and while continuing to walk, remove the item from his pocket and place it on the Exempt Area. An Exempt Area is any enclosed space over 3 tefachim high and smaller than 4 tefachim square, such as a fire hydrant, a parking meter. Preferably, the Exempt Area should be over 10 tefachim high. But for this option to work, two conditions must be met: The Exempt Area must be located within 4 Amos of where he is standing and the item must be placed in such a way that it can rest on it at least momentarily and not roll off immediately.

Something for the Shabbos table

After the plague of frogs, Pharaoh calls in Moshe and begs him to ask Hashem to remove the frogs. Interestingly, Pharaoh asks that the frogs be removed 'tomorrow' (8:6).

Why did Pharaoh not ask for them to be removed immediately?

Explains the Ibn Ezra that Pharaoh thought that a star sign had brought the plague of frogs, and perhaps the frogs were going to leave today anyway. So he asked Moshe to remove the frogs tomorrow, just in case the frogs would up and go today so Pharaoh could prove Moshe wrong.

Here we see the extent of stubbornness. Pharaoh has already experienced the plague of blood. He has now seen frogs, and Moshe had warned him that these frogs would come. Yet Pharaoh still wants to cling on to the security of believing that there is no Power above him - so he creates his own reality; one in which 'a star sign created the plague' - despite all indications to the contrary.

This is a very powerful lesson, how often do let ourselves become blinded by our own egos and predeterminations.
