Halocha from the Daf

The Gemorah in Shabbos Daf 125b discusses some of the halochos of adding to an existing ohel (canopy) on Shabbos. Some of the practical outcomes of these halochos are:

One may open a collapsible awning that is attached to a building on Shabbos, even if it is done to protect from the rain or sun. This is because it resembles the opening and closing of a door or window. The awning may be opened even if it had not been opened at all before Shabbos.

A baby stroller hood that is attached and built-in to the stroller is similar to an awning and may be opened and closed.

If the hood was opened before Shabbos one may spread a cover over the remaining opening, because one may add to an existing ohel. However if the hood was folded, one is required to first unfold it. One may not spread the covering while the hood is still in its folded state, because the folds are similar to a rolled up cover (which is not considered an existing ohel even if it is a tefach)

One may not hold an umbrella on Shabbos even if it was previously opened. This is because an umbrella is considered a Halachic ohel, since it protects the area underneath it from rain or sun. Although the comparison between the umbrella and an attached awning seems to make sense the poskim saw fit to extend the issur of ohel to umbrellas (See Chazon Ish Siman 52:6)

Something for the Shabbos table

In this weeks parsha we are told "Should you see your enemy's donkey sprawled under its burden, would you fail to help him? You shall surely help him along." (23:5)

In Hebrew, "You shall surely help him along" are the words "azov taazov imo". Targum Onkelos translates the words to mean something different: "surely you shall abandon what you have in your heart against him and help him unload." The words "azov taazov" can also mean to forsake or abandon, namely the hatred in your heart that you have against your enemy.

Targum Onkelos is teaching us a very important and significant lesson concerning our approach towards self improvement. A person must be constantly on the "rise" towards self-improvement. It's not enough that a person helps his enemy with a burden because the Torah commands him to do so; a person must at the same time eradicate the hatred festering within. Judaism is a religion premised on a person "rising" and growing towards becoming better as a result. If you're not better today than yesterday, then you're on the decline spiritually.
