SHELLING NUTS AND PEAS ON SHABBOS

The Gemorah (Beitza 13b) writes that one mustn't roll grain between one's fingers to remove its chaff on Shabbos. Such extraction, mefarek, is a tolda of the melacha of dosh, threshing. The Shulchan Aruch (OC 319:6), writes, therefore, that if one wants to eat the grain, one would have to remove the chaff with a shinui such as using one's fingertips. The Magen Avraham (OC 319:8) and Mishna Berura (319:21) add that this prohibition only applies when the pod or shell is inedible.

There is a machlokes, however, as to what exactly mefarek applies to. According to the Taz (OC 319:4), it only applies when the food is attached to its outside shell such as peas in a pod while the Maharil and Pri Megadim write that it applies specifically to loose food, unattached to its shell like peanuts. Following this, R' Shmuel Vosner (Shevet Halevi 1:81) forbids shelling peanuts on Shabbos. R' Yitzchak Yaakov Weiss (Minchas Yitzchak 3:32) follows the Taz, however, and writes that one may shell peanuts right before one wants to eat them. Likewise, R' Eliezer Waldenberg (Tzitz Elizer 10:24) writes that when it is normal for food to be removed right before it is eaten, there is no prohibition in removing its shell, especially when it's a hard shell. Thus, pistachio and sunflower seeds, etc. may be opened and eaten on Shabbos (See Mishna Berura 319:24; Igros Moshe OC 1:125).

Something for the Shabbos table

In this week's parsha the Torah instructs us, "If there shall be a destitute person amongst you... you shall surely open your hand and lend him money, as much as he needs; whatever he is lacking" (Devarim 15, 7-8).

Rav Wolbe writes that kindness is not limited to fulfilling another's request for help. The title ba'al chesed is reserved for one who has the ability to discern what is needed without the request being made, and then fulfils that desire.

However, kindness is not restricted to monetary donations. A smile can uplift someone who is dejected, and words of encouragement can bring another real happiness. These are such small actions that could have such big ramifications. These are merely two of many kindnesses that we have the ability to perform - if we just took notice of what people are missing! Everyone appreciates a compliment, and almost anyone you come in contact with benefits from a good word or a cheerful smile. So, do a chessed that takes no time or money and make a point of complimenting or encouraging someone - today (and every day)!
