Squeezing Lemons on Shabbos

The Shulchan Aruch (OC 320:1) writes that it is forbidden mideoraisa (prohibition of sechita) to squeeze olives and grapes on Shabbos as these fruits are planted primarily to make oil and wine. It is forbidden derabanan to squeeze other fruits such as pomegranates or strawberries to make drinks on Shabbos. The Shulchan Aruch (320:6) writes that one may however, squeeze lemons on Shabbos. Elsewhere (Beis Yosef OC 320), he explains that people in Egypt would do so on Shabbos. Firstly, he reasons, as lemon juice can't be drunk unless it has been diluted, it isn't considered a regular juice. Secondly, they would do so into sugared water, rather than into an empty container (See Teshuvos Harosh 22:2).

Many of the poskim challenge this, as lemons are primarily grown for their juice. The Mishna Berura (320:22), Kaf Hachaim (OC 320:36) and R' Yehoshua Neuwirth (Shemiras Shabbos Kehilchasa 5:5) write that as nowadays, juice is primarily squeezed to make lemon juice for drinking, one mustn't squeeze the lemons straight into water or into an empty container. Rather, one should squeeze the lemons onto sugar before adding water.

Nonetheless, squeezing lemons directly onto a salad wouldn't pose a problem (See Shulchan Aruch OC 320:4).

Something for the Shabbos table

Some of the Mitzvos in this week's parsha deal with things that should not be mixed / put together eg kilaim, shatnez, etc. The Torah tells us not to wear shatnez (22;11) – this means wearing something which has a combination of wool and linen in.

What is the message of this Halacha? The Daas Zekeinim brings two reasons. Firstly, he explains that since the peroches was made of both wool and linen, Hashem didn't want anything else made of those materials. This is similar to the ketores which the Torah forbids anything else to be made with the same measure as the ketores.

The second reason the Daas Zekeinim brings is based on the following; when the two sons of Adam; Kayin and Hevel argued and ultimately brought the first murder to the world, it was because one brought wool as part of their sacrifice to Hashem, and the other brought linen. Therefore, as a reminder not to cause machlokes, we are told never to mix these two materials – wool and linen; so that we live with this message. We see here the devastating effects of machlokes, and the extent that the Torah goes to try and rid us of any vestige of meaningless machlokes and breaking down of interpersonal relationships. After all, if Hashem is to be our Father, then we must agree to get on together as His children.
